HOW TO BE CHEERY.

I said if there were only a recipe for cheerfulness, as there certainly is for bread, we would all be glad to try it. How charming such recipe would be, perhaps if there were such a recipe adequate to certain cheerfulness that we would all try it. It would take time and trouble. Cheerfulness cannot be taught like writing in twenty lessons, nor analyzed and classified and set forth in a manual such as "The Art of Polite Conversation" or "Etiquette Made Easy for Ladies and Gentlemen." It does not keep like no surface rules of behavior and description ever so careful. It must grow of itself, does not like lies, not do can ever enable a person to take it up and "master" it like a tune or a study. I believe that it is in the nature a good gift from God at once a birth very much dependent on somebody and a thing to be more profoundly grateful for than all that genius ever inspired or talent ever accomplished. The is natural spontaneous inevitable cheerfulness. Thus if we are not born with it we cannot have. But it must be to this to cultivate, intended, and persistent cheerfulness which we can create, can cultivate, and can foster and cherish that after a few years the world will never suspect that it was not a hereditary gift handed down to us from generations. To do this we have only to watch the cheerful people we know and follow their example. We shall see, first that the cheery person never minds, or if he minds never says a word about—small worries vexations perplexities. Second that he is bountiful of sympathy in other people's gladness he is heartily genuinely glad of every bit of good luck or joy which comes to other people. Thirdly he has a keen sense of humor and never lets any droll thing escape him: he thinks it worth while to laugh and to make everybody about him laugh at every amusing thing, no matter how small. he has his laugh and a good hearty laugh too, and tries to make everybody share it. Patience, sympathy and humor these are the three most manifest traits in the cheery person. But there is something else, which is more an emotion than a trait, more a state of feeling than a quality of mind. This is lovingness. This is the secret, so far as there is a secret this is the real point of difference between the mirth of the witty and sarcastic person which does us no good and the mirth of the cheery person which does it good like a medicine.

Somebody once asked a great painter whose pictures were remarkable for their exquisite and beautiful coloring. "Pray, Mr ——, how do you mix your colors?"

With brains, madam—with brains, growled the painter. His ill-nature spoke a truth. All men had or might have the colors he used, but no man produced the colors he produced.

So I would say of cheerfulness. Patience, sympathy and humor are the colors, but patience may be mere doggedness and reticence, sympathy may be wordy and shallow and selfish, and humor may be only a sharp perception of the ridiculous. Only when they are mixed with love—love, three times love—do we have the true good cheer of genuine cheery people.—H. H., St Nicholas for April

DYING WORDS

SUNSET IN SPAIN.—An hour before sunset we started from Toledo for the railway station * * * We have been zigzagging down the face of the rock and have reached the old bridge spanning the wide and deserted chasm, which looks as if it might be a hundred miles from any town. Here we have to wait while some finely mounted cavaliers cross the bridge, and fancy pictures in their steel turbaned horses, with scimitars or gaily dressed Spaniards, whose spears and rich trappings reflect the last lingering rays of the sun. Then our idealized heroes pass with a bow and a murmur of what we take to be excuses for detaining us, and we dash across the stone arch and trot with tinkling bells through the meadows frequently turning to look back at the old city whose rich reddish browns are deepened by the flood of colored sunlight while the golden masts that cover everything soften the sharp corners into the ruins of war and time and give us a dreamy beautiful picture of the past. Then the light fades and against the other glow I see that Toledo walls but clearly through each casement is visible over the valley of gloom the twilight and I almost before we realize that the day is done a large glimmering evening star appears and we thus pass a couple of the second.—Bendal, in St Louis Globe

Depressing Maladies.

Dyspepsia constipation and biliousness as well as the blues of the nervous system all arise from a torpidity sympathy up in the brain frequently causing a degree of mental depression if not really akin to insanity. The surest way to rid the blues thus produced is to use that healing and tonic to bodily irregularity and kidney troubles Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. A course of the great corrective will promptly remove the malicious vexatious depleting symptoms and restores the cheerfulness which is such a characteristic attendant of good health. It likewise imparts vigor to the constitution which its genial safeguard against disease and the best remedy for chills and fever. The aged and infirm will find it a mild but effective tonic.

Advertised by Smiths

Is a point at which all persons will daily find occasion to pause between the parlor and the street. Should the door of the store with which it is connected open upon the latter, those who have occasion to enter will find it convenient to do so.

Those who do not employ this facility to advertise will often find it necessary to do so. Their customers will be attracted by the advertisements of their competitors, and will be induced to call upon them. Thus the business of the former will be diminished, while that of the latter will be increased. Every part of the body which is not used becomes weak. Advertising is the life of business. Any man who expresses the contrary opinion is himself an evidence of the truth of what he denies. Advertising is the only thing which will keep a man's name before the public, and without publicity no man can succeed.

Commercial.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, April 12, 1876.

The Commercial News of San Francisco publishes a list of vessels composing the present fleet of ships for the season of 1875-76 their cargoes, the names of shippers, destination, rate of freight, date of sailing and the arrival of those who have reached their destination. The list is quite complete up to March 10th and embraces 69 vessels, all of which were destined for ports in Great Britain except three—J. A. Falkinburg, and Mattie Maclean for Honolulu and the W. H. Lee for Hongkong. Of the vessels for Great Britain about one half the number has arrived out. The freight rates have ranged very materially ranging from £3 15s to £4. The lowest rate received by any vessel being £3 15s paid to the bark Ship City of Hankow dispatched in September while the three vessels the Thomas Daniel and Abercrombie dispatched in January, received £4 freight. The Cassina the first vessel of the season received £4 5s and the Doune Castle the last on the list received £3 10s. Six vessels were loaded on owners account and of two the rates of charter were private. If the date of sailing as given be correct, which is not so with some other vessels in the list the longest time consumed in the voyage by the ships which have arrived out was by the McNear 170 days and the shortest by the City of Hankow 109 days. The Western Shore is given as sailing December 21st whereas we believe she crossed the bar going out, on the 10th of January. In most particulars the list is correct and will be found interesting to shippers and others.

Marine Disasters for January.

The Directors of the Bureau Veritas has just published the following statistics of maritime disasters reported during the month of January 1876, concerning all flags. Sailing vessels reported lost—27 vessels English, 11 American 13 French 6 German 4 Norwegian 4 Australian 2 Danish 2 Spanish 2 Greek 3 Italian 2 Dutch 2 Russian, 1 Portuguese 13 of which the nationality is unknown, total 96 in the number are included 9 vessels reported missing. Steamers reported lost—2 steamers English 1 Spanish 1 German, 1 American, 1 Danish 1 Italian 1 Swedish, total, 9

Trade Matters,

Locally are not changed in their general aspect from the condition noticed yesterday though this being steamer day makes matters a little more lively. The decline in wheat is still maintained as far as quotations are concerned, but as no transactions are noted it is of course only nominally that prices are given at all. There are some offers to sell but as the vessels at hand are either finished or their cargoes secured buyers are unwilling to advance beyond the figure which is given. Oats are in good demand at quotations and sales are reported at our best figures. Eggs are weaker and will decline to-morrow or by Saturday at furthest. Potatoes are in good demand and are unless dried fruit and some other minor products. Provisions are supplied quite liberally and with some demand for shipping and a fair local trade, dealers are doing quite the average amount of business.

Should the fair weather continue the wool clip will begin to come forward in a short time but as yet there is but little doing though buyers are ready to make contracts at a low figure. If our look for this staple in the market is not a disappointment.
